Dear Kevin:

In order to enable Point Foundation to proceed to negotiate a publishing agreement with any publisher of its choosing for a complete HyperCard stack version of the Whole Earth Catalog, Apple Computer, Inc. (hereafter "Apple") agrees that

a) Apple, per previous verbal agreement with Point Foundation, has the right to produce and distribute only the 6,200 copies of the Whole Earth Learning Disc (hereafter the "Work," described in full in Exhibit B of the Consulting Agreement between Apple and Point Foundation dated December 4, 1987) in its possession as a result of Apple's participation in the development of the Work.

b) Apple represents that the total 6,200 allowed copies have been produced, that the master copy of the Work in Apple's possession has been destroyed, and that the existing copies have been and will be used only for demonstration and complementary, promotional distribution.

c) Apple will not, without the express written permission of the Point Foundation, and any publisher with whom Point Foundation may enter into a publishing agreement for the Work, make any copies of the Work available for sale.

d) Apple has no further claims of ownership on the editorial content of the Work. Apple reserves the right to reapply, in any way it sees fit, the user interface and scripting techniques, and particular interfaces and scripts developed in the course of its prior participation in development of the Work. In consideration of Point Foundation's intent to complete the work as a product, Apple grants an unlimited license of any proprietary rights which it may have in these interfaces and scripts to Point Foundation, and to any publisher with whom Point Foundation may enter into a publishing agreement for the Work.
